Trip Overview

Zip lining is just another sport supporting the fact that man has the ability to turn anything to entertainment. An act that initially started as a necessity to transport things using gravity from one hill to another became a subject of interest to some adventurous lovers. They used this science to fuel their own adrenaline rush.

And so started the concept of zipline the longest, fastest and the tallest of which is situated in Pokhara, Nepal. The flight is from a height of 2000ft at a speed of 100 miles per hour. It will take you around the Annapurna and the Machhapuchhre range as you descend to green hills and eventually to the lowlands.

There are many other relatively less thrilling but extremely exciting zip lines in Nepal. If you are out of time to climb the mountain by yourself but seek to get a glimpse of it up close, Ziplining is the sport for you.
